Billionaire, Vivian Reddy, has donated a whopping R35,000 towards a fun run/walk that is being hosted by the Rotary Club of Merewent on May 17. During an event at the Enchanted Gardens at the Old Airport on Wednesday evening, Reddy who was a guest speaker was also awarded a certificate of appreciation for his continuous contribution towards the organisation. Rotary president, Rocky Naidoo, highlighted the two productive years since the club's inception in 2012 under the leadership of past president, John Baijnath and Savi Simon. The club has come a long way in helping those in need and making the lives of others better. "Our main objective as rotarians is to encourage and foster the ideal of service as a basic enterprise and continue to better lives by building more gardens, feeding the hungry and educating children on various topics," said Naidoo. Reddy took the stage to address the crowd as well as salute the rotarians for all their hard work. "Service to humanity is the best work of life and I urge my fellow businessman to invest in humanity. As humans, we tend to walk around with blinkers therefore I challenge each one of you to go into the communities and reach out, especially in this time of xenophobia. As communities we need to protect the people and learn to live a life with love and forgiveness," said Reddy.

Vivian Reddy presented with a certificate of appreciation from Rocky Naidoo, rotary president.

SAPREF worker dies after explosion

One person is dead and two were left seriously injured after a fuel pipeline exploded at the SAPREF refinery, last Friday. It's believed that the workers were working on the pipeline when it exploded. The fire was quickly extinguished by SAPREF's own fire department and the cause is being investigated by SAPREF's internal investigators. An inquest docket has been opened at Isipingo SAPS. Police spokesman, Cpt David Ragavan said, "SAPREF is a national key point with a controlled access system so to get in there one will need an ID card. It was quite difficult to enter the site, but we will assist SAPREF where we can."

SAPREF communications manager, Cindy Govender, said that SAPREF will be bringing their planned shutdown forward for this week for further investigation and maintenance of the refinery. This is the second incident of this nature that occurred in a space of two weeks. Community members in Merbank flooded social networks expressing their concern over the recent incidents at SAPREF. One commentator said that she thought it was thunder when she heard the explosion, but when she looked outside she noticed that the sky was bright orange. "Refinery explosions seem to be the norm in Durban South. This is surely creating a massive environmental problem in our community," said the woman. The two employees who were left with serious burns are in a stable condition.

R40,000 gold jewellery con

An 88-year-old pensioner has been left devastated after she was conned of R40,000 worth of jewellery, recently. Nulliah Siddamma, a Merbank resident who lives on her own, said that a day before the robbery a woman called her claiming that she knew her and her family and wanted to pay her a visit. The pensioner who believed that this lady might be a relative agreed to the visit. "The following day, the woman who had black stripes on her face, came to see me. I invited her in and she began talking about my family as if she knew them. She then said that she was an official at the MTSS Hall and invited me to join the senior citizens on their annual trips," she said. Siddamma continued to speak to the woman. "She was persistent about me joining her on the trips and asked me a few personal questions about how much money I have and where I keep it. She also wanted to have a look at the other rooms and asked if the bangles on my wrists were real gold. At that time, I did not find it strange. I felt as if I wasn't in my right state of mind," she added. The visit grew stranger for the pensioner when she asked the guest what her name was. The question was quickly averted. The mysterious woman then showed the 88-year-old pictures of other elderly women who are part of the MTSS group and insisted that she put on her jewellery and pose for a picture. "I reluctantly went into my room and put on my two gold pieces which I had for over 20 years," said Siddamma. After her picture was taken, she went back into her room to store away her jewellery, unaware that the woman was watching her. "I suddenly needed to use the toilet so I left the woman alone sitting on my couch. I heard her shout 'Where are you?' While Siddamma was in the bathroom, the woman told the elderly woman that she needed to go. "When I went back to the lounge she was gone. I went to my room and noticed that my jewellery had disappeared. I was devastated and felt violated that this woman used my trust to gain access into my home by using my family's names. In the 50 years that I have been living here, I never have I experienced such a crime," said a traumatised Siddamma. She contacted the local police but no report was taken from her. Anitha Pillay, a social worker at the Durban Association for the Aged (DAFTA), said "We urge the elderly to be careful about who they trust or take advice from. At DAFTA, we offer legal advice which we strongly recommend them to use. It is sad to note what happened to Nulliah and we ask the elderly to be wary of people who are looking for a quick buck. Criminals will always target the elderly as they are seen as weak and defenceless. Do not let anyone take advantage of you. We encourage senior citizens to join our day-care centre especially if they are living alone as they have the chance to interact with people and be safe doing so," said Pillay.

Bail opposed for armed robbers

Bail was opposed at the Scottburgh Court for five men from Umlazi who were arrested and charged with conspiracy to commit armed robbery, possession of unlicensed firearms and ammunition and an explosive device. Last Friday night, Brighton Beach Cluster Anti Carjacking and House Robbery Task Team received intelligence about five men planning to commit a house robbery in the Scottburgh area. The task team was mobilised and they made their way to Scottburgh only with a description of the vehicle, make and colour in hand. The exact location was not known to the team so they chose to hold a waylay operation on the main road leading to Scottburgh with the Port Shepstone K9 Unit member.

After waiting more than two hours, Sergeant Jooste spotted the vehicle taking the Scottburgh off ramp. The vehicle was followed by the Brighton Beach Task Team and Port Shepstone K9 Unit vehicle travelling into the direction of Dududu.

After spotting the marked police vehicles, a high speed chase ensued between the suspects and police. With advance driving techniques, Sergeant Jooste forced the suspects' vehicle off the road and the suspects were tactically removed from their vehicle.

Upon searching the suspects and vehicle they found; two fully loaded unlicensed firearms, a stun grenade, balaclavas, gloves and cable ties. The items found in the vehicle also fit the modus operandi of items used recently during several house robberies that were committed in the Amanzimtoti, Folweni, Park Rynie and Isipingo policing area. Suspects are being linked to other crimes. The firearms will also be sent for forensic analysis to confirm if they have been used in the commission of other offences. Brighton Beach Cluster Commander, Brigadier James Sayer, commended Sgt. Jooste, Cst Nene, Cst Pule and the Port Shepstone K9-Unit members for their operational support and team work which led to the arrests and recovery of the unlicensed firearms and explosive device. The suspect has been remanded to Westville prison and will appear at court for bail application on April 29.

Alleged female drug dealer granted R30, 000 bail

A 27-year-old Wentworth woman, alleged to be a drug dealer, was granted bail of R30, 000 after she was arrested during a joint operation between the KZN Hawks and the Durban National Intervention Unit, recently.

During the operation, she was found in possession of 800 straws of heroin and 700 mandrax tablets, which were concealed in black bags. Following her apprehension, she was charged with possession and dealing in heroin and a second charge of possession and dealing in mandrax was also added.

Brighton Beach Cluster media officer, Cpt Louise Le Roux said, "The South African Police Services welcomes the arrest and also the seizure of the banned substances. The eradication of drug use and distribution can only be achieved with the co-operation of the community. We urge community members to report users and distributors."

Cpt Le Roux further commended the KZN Hawks and the National Intervention Unit-Durban for their efficiency and dedication shown during the covert operation. Anonymous electronic reports can be made via an SMS Hotline to 32211. For more information, visit www.crimeline.co.za

Ferrari California T

Magical Maranello missile

By James Siddall

Here are some things that aren't over-rated. Love. Dogs. Exercise. And Ferraris. Now Ferrari is easily the world's most glittering automotive brand and nothing I've driven quite galvanises onlookers like one of these machines from Maranello - and I've helmed a few of them.

So you might think that maybe - just maybe - once you slice past the hype they're not quite so wonderful, not quite so worthy of the lore and legend surrounding them. You'd be wrong.

It so happens that the current crop of Ferraris is beyond superb on all levels, while these cars truly do embody metaphysical soul, being so much more than a mere agglomeration of metal, glass, and rubber. The new California T is a good example indeed, embodying as it does the manufacturer's current swing away from traditional, naturally aspirated engines towards turbocharging, something that we'll see more of when the new 488 GTB reaches us in early 2016.

Now some detractors might have mumbled that the original California was a bit of a "soft" Ferrari. A boulevard cruiser, albeit a beautiful and fast one. Well, with the advent of turbocharging the new car's torque is up by a massive 49 percent - to 755Nm. Power increases by 52kW to 412kW. And that's enough to move the red machine - because all Ferraris are red, aren't they? - from rest to 100km/h in 3.6 seconds. Top speed is a claimed 316km/h. Supercar stuff. Fuel consumption, meanwhile, has dropped by 15 percent, although I can't quite imagine that being of special concern to buyers in this rarefied segment.

But never mind cold, old figures. The turbocharging of this V8 machine - whose engine capacity is now down to 3,855cc - should make converts of even purists who eschew force-fed motors, with power delivery being linear and sequential. Turbo-lag is imperceptible. Near non-existent. And very, very importantly the acoustics are finer than ever, acoustics being something that are often compromised with turbocharging. Prod the throttle and this Ferrari wails and shrieks and makes the blood run cold.

The 2+2 machine is also a finely wrought beast and build quality is stellar. The days when Ferraris were apparently just engines with the rest of the car being a casual - if beautifully styled - afterthought are long gone. It's practical too. This is the second California I've spent time with - the first being the original, normally aspirated model - and it would be quite feasible to use one of these cars on a daily basis, all the more so with the retractable hard top which opens or closes in 14 seconds.

And here's another important bit. The California T is a far sharper scalpel than the outgoing model.

Piloting the test car on everything from serpentine twisties to long freeway stretches rammed this home - and it's largely due to the likes of Magnaride dampers that respond 50 percent faster, improved steering response, and a new steering box and suspension set-up. Add to this the latest evolution of the F1-Trac control system and a carbon-ceramic braking system, and the machine is a bona fide performance package. One that's as capable of grand touring and shopping trips as it is of dealing with a race track.

It also looks quite simply superb thanks to major styling upgrades in collaboration with Pininfarina, and from its Frau semi-aniline leather trim to flanks inspired by the 250 Testa Rossa's famous pontoon-fender styling, it's a Faberge egg of a package.

The price? This entry-level Ferrari - if you'll pardon the misnomer - is yours for R3.68 million.

Audi's new TT is tops

By Gavin Foster

Motoring journalists often have to be careful when, after a string of posh cars, they're supplied a much cheaper vehicle to evaluate. The less expensive jobbie often feels hopelessly inadequate and under-equipped until you've had time to readjust your viewpoint to the real world.

After a succession of big, very powerful test vehicles the much cheaper, albeit still expensive, Audi TT TFSI 2.0 Coupé that fell into my clutches a few weeks ago came as a breath of fresh air because within 100 metres it reminded me what driving pleasure is all about.

The recently-launched new range has shrunk from seven models with three engines to just two models, both coupés, sharing a 169kW / 370Nm turbocharged petrol engine. That's slightly up from the 155kW / 350Nm of the older two-litre version, and the car's about 50kg lighter, which all makes a difference. There will be a 228kW TTR version arriving later this year.

The recently-launched third-generation TT is sharper and a little more hard-core looking than the old, with sharper lines and beefy twin tailpipes. It's the same length as the outgoing car, but has a slightly longer wheelbase which makes for a more spacious cabin.

The new interior is a joy because of its minimalist, almost Spartan layout that doesn't overwhelm with hard-to-work-out knobs, levers and switches. The digital speedometer and rev-counter are in the usual place ahead of the driver, with the audio and driver displays sharing a tidy 12" screen.

The test car came with brown leather upholstery, with most of the rest of the interior being black with an occasional touch of matte silver just

3... 2... 1... Launching: The New Polo GTI and Golf Sports van

By Vincent Wallace

I just spoke with 'The Volkswagen People' at Barons Durban on Edwin Swales Drive, and I was thrilled to hear that they are ready to launch the two latest additions to the Volkswagen family: The New Polo GTI and the Golf Sports van.

As with all New Volkswagen's, each comes complete with the quality and reliability of Das Auto engineering as well as the fuel efficiency and economy of BlueMotion Technology. Furthermore, the New Polo GTI combines THRILL and COMFORT like a Prestige Cinema seat in a 3D IMAX movie an idea that certainly appeals to me. And the Golf Sports van offers a higher driving position without getting all up in your grill SUV style – a concept that really appeals to my wife. I can foresee a heated debate in the Wallace household...

Barons Durban on Edwin Swales Drive – 'The Volkswagen People' – offer a Super Convenient 60 Minute Express Service every Saturday. To Book a Test Drive or Service, call 0860 BARONS. 'The TT has soul and it's enormous fun if you enjoy driving and don't need a four-seater' to break the gloom. The TT still has two tiny rear seats that aren't fit for purpose, but the area they occupy expands the boot from a reasonable 305 litres to a mammoth 712 litres when they're folded forwards.

But driving is what this car is all about, so I stopped taking notes and set forth.

The TT was the two-wheel drive version that retails at R558,000 - that's R84,000 cheaper than the all-wheel-drive version and I'd save the money if I were buying. Both models come only with a six-speed auto dual-clutch transmission, but as Audi sold six autos for every manual in the last TT range the decision to drop the manual probably makes sense.

The Audi TT feels like a little go-kart on the road. It's very lively, with the 0-100 sprint being dispensed with in under six seconds, and there's loads of torque throughout the rev range.

Handling on the road is impeccable, the steering precise and the ride would be hard if this wasn't a sports car, but for what it is, that's perfect. The TT has soul and it's enormous fun if you enjoy driving and don't need a four-seater.

It's also beautifully built and the pricing is reasonable - if you have the money.

Hyundai plans fourth plant in China

Hyundai Motor Company broke ground on 3 April for a fourth new factory in Changzhou, China.

Hyundai Motor's vice chairman Mr Euisun Chung, the governor of China's Hebei province, Mr Zhang Qingwei, the Korean ambassador to China, Mr Jang-soo Kim, and other 600 distinguished guests were present at the ground breaking event.

"We will rewrite the legacy of 'Hyundai Speed' and 'Hyundai Miracle' with our Chinese partners by the construction of this plant," said Mr Chung.

The Changzhou factory, built on 1.92 million m2 site with a floor space of 250,000m2, will be a fully equipped plant with a press shop, body, paint and assembly lines, in addition to an engine plant.

The construction of the Changzhou factory will be completed at the end of 2016 with the capacity to produce 200,000 strategic small cars for Hyundai. The plans are to expand capacity to 300,000 units in 2018.

Hyundai Motor will use high-tech automotive manufacturing facilities and knowledge to make Changzhou a smart, environment-friendly factory. By installing the latest automation facilities in press, body, paint and assembly lines, a flexible production system will be in operation. A recycling system, including recycling of gas emissions, water and waste discharge, will also be implemented at the new factory.

In addition, Hyundai Motor will break ground for the building of its Chongqing factory in the second half of this year to advance into Midwest China, which is expected to surge in demand for cars

through government in-land development schemes.

The eventual addition of the Chongqing factory will bring the number of Hyundai assembly plants in China to five.

Hyundai also manufactures cars and commercial vehicles in the brand's country of origin, South Korea, as well as the United States, India, the Czech Republic, Turkey, Russia and Brazil.

Hyundai Automotive South Africa, the local distributor and importer of Hyundai passenger and commercial vehicles, started production of HD commercial trucks last year in its factory in Apex, Benoni, and added the SKD assembly of the H100 Bakkie to the production line in the factory in February this year.

KZN finally gets a permanent drag strip

At last KZN finally has its own permanent drag strip. Dezzi Raceway in Port Shepstone will open a certified quarter-mile drag strip in June.

The 13 meter wide track will allow for tandem racing as well as single run shoot outs. The first drag event, endorsed and managed by Motorsport South Africa (MSA), is scheduled to take place on 27 and 28 June.

The opening follows the announcement of a new KZN drag representative for Motorsport South Africa, Darren Lewis. "This drag strip is instrumental in promoting a positive reputation for the sport in the province, as well as curbing illegal drag racing.

"There has been a big demand for a local track and we're pleased to now have a permanent facility," said Lewis.

Drag race events at the Dezzi Raceway will be handicapped according to their capabilities, races will be conducted in class categories and a championship format will be used to determine winners.

Dezzi Raceway owner, Des Gutzeit said: "Mo-

The new drag strip forms part of a larger race facility at the Dezzi Raceway comprising of two drift tracks, a full circuit track, three pits, viewing decks and banks, marshaling towers, hospitality zones, a timing office, a briefing room, as well as showers and toilets. A large entertainment facility is currently under construction.

"We anticipate a big influx of visitors to the area for these events, and we have built the facilities to ensure fans experience an unforgettable day at the races" said Gutzeit.
