'Pawfect' haven for dogs

Guard and stray dogs from the impoverished community of Clairwood have become the responsibility of animal lover and philanthropist Debbie Moss in recent months.

The Bluff resident, developed a compassion for animals, mostly stray dogs in the area, and every Wednesday for the past 18 months, she feeds, spays, deworms and nurture these helpless dogs.

Moss detailed how she started the 'Bark Angels' foundation. "A friend of mine contacted me and asked if I knew anyone who would be interested in feeding the dogs in the Clairwood area. I jumped at the opportunity as I always loved dogs and being an owner of 12 dogs, I knew how to handle them. I started buying dog food and delivering these items to homes and fed all the strays. I feed between 70 to 100 dogs a day.

"My family were supportive of my decision, and even spread the word. I received a great response as donations from friends were made, and meat supply businesses and pet shops contacted me to sponsor pet food and medication."

Moss also offers the dogs medical care, she spays them if the need to do so arises, she conducts deworming and if they are unwell. She also takes them to a vet and comes around everyday to feed them antibiotics if needed.

Long time friend-Gail Honneysett, who assists Moss during her feeding rounds, described her as a true animal lover.

"She is passionate about what she is doing and expects no reward as the love she receives from the dogs are good enough. Dogs truly sense her good nature and that she is there to help and not hurt them."

If anyone would like to make donations or sponsor food and medicine, contact Debbie Moss on 082 291 4373.

Debbie Moss is showered with affection by the dogs she takes care of.

Power outage sparks fury in Clairwood

Two Clairwood families were forced to live in darkness for over two weeks, after their power cables were cut by a superlink horse-n-trailer. They residents also claimed that their attempts to request for assistance from the eThekweni Municipality's electricity department were unsuccessful.

An infuriated Ambar Road resident, Sheila Maharaj, said, "One of the horse-n-trailers was traveling on our road, when the driver of the truck climbed onto my pavement to avoid another truck, ripping out the power cables which is connected to my neighbour's home and my house.

Fortunately, he stopped before causing any further damage."

"Apart from the trucks invading our road, we have a problem with the electricity department. We called them to assist us and we were told that they will come to our house, but they took over two weeks to come," she said. She further added, "Out of frustration, we called a private electrician, which we had to pay for out of own pockets. Unfortunately, they told us, they can't touch the poles because that is the municipality's job."

Another resident, Zaiboon Amod, whose cables were also ripped out, said, "The trucks traveling on this road need to move somewhere else as this is a residential road. We do not need these trucks here, they are causing a nuisance. The truck not only ripped out my power cables but also damaged my roof, which I will have to fix with my money."

"If we do not receive any help soon, then we will have to take matters into our hands. We will put up pillars at the end of the road, so no trucks will be able to enter."

The eThekweni's Head of Communications, Tozi Mthethwa said, "Ethekewini Municipality is deeply concerned about the prolonged disruption of electricity, water, housing, roads and storm water services. We are concerned about the effect it has on the daily lives of residents. The city leadership, staff, contractors and aggrieved parties are working together to ensure we can restore the delivery of essential services."

Senior Security Manager Department of Health - Promise Biyela, General Manager Park Patrol Security Service - Lorraine Jenkins, ADT Security Services - Lee Munsami and Park Patrol Security Services PRO - Hendrik Koekemoer were awarded by Brighton Beach SAPS station commissioner - Col Carel Grobler.

Police award partners for valued contribution

A prize-giving ceremony was held last Monday by Brighton Beach SAPS Division Media Monitoring in recognition of the role that the eThekweni Municipality, Department of Health, Park Patrol Security Services and ADT Security Service (Pty) Ltd played during Operational Fiel 2015/2016. The role-players received framed media articles of their major projects held in partnership with Brighton Beach Division Media Monitoring.

During the campaigns, six operational activities were held, which included visits to educational institutes, a visit to the Wentworth Hospital and the distribution of flyers at the Bluff- Oxford Intersection and local shopping malls. A total of 8500 flyers/brochures focusing on child safety and protection, protection of older persons, and the prevention of domestic violence was distributed over a three-day period.

Brighton Beach station commissioner, Col Carel Grobler, who awarded the partners said, "We are thankful for the support we received during the media monitoring initiatives of Fiel 2015/2016. The involvement of other government departments and the business sector has proven that police can achieve more when we stand together and unite against those with criminal intentions."

Accused in dock for possession of stolen firearm

Police apprehended a 30-year-old man for being in possession of an unlicensed firearm in Beaunoir Avenue, last Wednesday. Wentworth police officer, W/O Craig Brigetta and Cnst Errol Thamsanqa Ndlovu, were patrolling the area when they noticed a blue vehicle with five occupants driving slowly along the road. The members stopped the vehicle and the driver and occupants alighted the car. "As the accused jump off and closed the back door, W/O Brigetta heard something that sounded like heavy metal fall on the ground. When he looked down, the officer noticed that the accused had dropped a firearm (pistol) on the ground. W/O Brigetta picked up the firearm which when checked was discovered to be a stolen firearm. The man was arrested for being in possession of a stolen firearm,"

Truck drivers urged to be cautious of thieves

The Montclair SAPS has encouraged truck owners to inform their drivers about a group of thieves who are operating in the South Coast Road/M4 off-ramp vicinity.

According to W/O Priscilla Ellapen from the Montclair SAPS, the thieves disconnect the robots at this particular intersection which leads to traffic congestion and distracts drivers. They then loiter around and wait for the trucks that are transporting food items.

"As the trucks exit the M4 and are stationary at the South Coast robot, they quickly cut the securing ropes, jump into the back of the vehicle and help each other offload whatever items the truck is carrying. The truck driver is unaware of the theft as they work very fast.

"Arrests have been made in the vicinity and management has increased police visibility, however, each individual or group who is arrested is soon replaced by another. Investigations and arrests are ongoing and we urge drivers to be more vigilant and aware of their surroundings," she added.

Police probe Jacobs shooting

Brighton Beach police are investigating the murder of a 57-year-old man who was shot dead last week, outside his work premises on Manchester Road, Jacobs.

While the motive for the shooting has not yet been established, it is believed that the shooting could be related to retrenchments that took place within the business during June/July 2015 of which the deceased, a Human Resources Manager at the company was part of.

Louise Le Roux. The South African Police services urges people who have information on the whereabouts of the suspect to come forward. Lead detective, Warrant Officer Grobler can be contacted on 073 434 4396 and your identity will remain anonymous.

"It is alleged that the victim was seated on a plastic chair, waiting for the gates to his work premises to open, when he was fatally shot in his head. The suspect who was seen dressed in a blue, two piece overall and white cap which partially covered his face had allegedly opened fire on the deceased before he fled the scene in the direction of Paisley Road. A search of the area by various law enforcement agencies yielded negative results," said Brighton beach SAPS communications officer, Cpt

A member of the community receives a pamphlet which addresses the carjacking issue.

Police conduct crime awareness campaign

In recent months, the community of Isipingo has been targeted by carjackers and in some cases people have not only lost their vehicles but their lives as well. "This crime is so well organised and based on opportunity. Although visible policing is a deterrent, perpetrators of the crime will move to another area. The trends always change but the modus operandi is always the same," said Isipingo communications officer, Cpt David Ragavan. Police have made many successful arrests and convictions but when one syndicate is brought down another springs up. It is a battle that the police cannot win alone, therefore the police is requesting for the community to get involved by being vigilant. "Members of Isipingo SAPS have been visiting various communities and conducting awareness campaigns. We recently visited the Isipingo Hills area and handed out pamphlets and held talks with the community on how to prevent becoming a victim of carjacking. It was a tremendous success," added Ragavan.

The 'Nightmare' who hails from Durban is one of Durban's biggest stars and will be participating in a hard-core match. WWP is the biggest wrestling promotion in the southern hemisphere and dominated national TV. WWP will be showcasing five action-packed wrestling bouts that will leave fans on the edge of their seats on February 20. They have SA's best high flying dare devil, 'Hotaru' who hails from Johannesburg going into battle against 'The Assassin' who is from Durban. Little do they both know that this battle of the cruiserweights has two other mysterious contenders. 'Renegade' is a feisty biker leader from Johannesburg who is always up for a fight as he takes on the current WWP heavyweight champion, 'Mr Wrestling.' Mr Wrestling has been WWP greatest champion and kindly accepts any challenges that come his way. The main event is not for the faint hearted as 'The Blacksmith' better known as living legend, Trevor van der Westhuizen who hails from Port Elizabeth. He reigned terror on all wrestlers from the West Ridge Stadium Era. Extremely angry that he is not a champion, he has put forward a challenge to the WWP hard-core champion who is none other than 'The Nightmare' who is one of Durban's biggest stars. This match is a no DQ no rules hard-core match. WWP wrestling takes place at the Sibaya Imbizo CC on February 20 at 4pm. For more information or to book your seat, call 074-997-1906. BMW 7 Series

Seventh heaven

By James Siddall

The BMW 7 Series and me go back a bit (I think it's grammatically correct to say "and I" but what I just wrote sounds better, less narcissistic for some reason).

In fact, we go back quite a bit indeed. The first 7 I had on test came around mid-1995 (I never did drive the E23, the first-generation 7 Series).

That was an E32. A 740i model. It must have been close to being on run out. In that big hissy-barge four of us travelled from Durban to Grahamstown, whence I covered the Grahamstown festival for Scope magazine on whose staff I was in those days. Fun times - even if my definition of fun has dramatically and distinctly changed.

Then came the E38. What a car. It still is. Even if the current 7 Series - which we're getting to - is a quantum leap over this car, which at time was at the pinnacle of automotive tech. I was still with Scope then, and I remember being given an eight-page slot to write about it. My title for the piece? Capitalist Tool.

Next came the E65. The controversial Chris Bangle-designed BMW. For the international launch of the 745iL version I went to Bangkok. And of course over the years I had numerous iterations on test. That was followed by the fifth-generation 7 Series, and that takes us to the all-new sixth-generation incarnation of BMW's flagship, launched recently to the South African media in Cape Town.

Now the press release - and that's just the main press release - is almost 16,000 words long, and there's a massive amount to say about this machine, sitting as it does at the very pinnacle of super saloons. I have only a tiny bit of space here, and the short version is that it's an astoundingly agile big machine, weighing as much as 130kg less than the previous car. It's also laden with technology that borders on science-fiction-like.

Two body variants are available, with a standard wheelbase at launch, and a long wheelbase due to go on sale a little later this year.

The machine - as we discovered during extensive driving on the launch - is more sumptuous, advanced and beautifully rendered than you can imagine. Yet as you'd expect from a BMW, it's extraordinarily driver-friendly. And as with certain other very good big cars, it seems to shrink around the driver, making it possible to hustle it along like a far smaller vehicle.

But it's the technology that beguiles. Just some of it includes full LED headlights as standard, with the option of BMW Laserlight, which premiered on the i8. The head-up display now provides a 75-percent larger projection on to the windscreen, while safety measures include steering and lane control assistant, lane keeping assistant, and front and rear crossing traffic warning. Indeed, this car is essentially semi-autonomous, and yet another tech highlight is BMW gesture control that allows intuitive and easy interaction with the infotainment system using predefined hand movements.

It rides beautifully, too, thanks to standard two-axle automatic self-leveling air suspension and Dynamic Damper Control as standard, with power running to the rear wheels through an eight-speed gearbox.

On the launch we drove two versions. The three-litre, six-cylinder turbodiesel 730d, and the three-litre, six-cylinder turbopetrol 740i, with a 750i to follow a little later this year - as well as a 740e plug-in hybrid.

Prices are substantial, but not absurd for this category.

The standard 730d - minus options and without delving into the various variants available - starts at R1,365,500. The 740i at R1,339,000. The top-range 750Li, meanwhile, will start at close to two bar.

Just...magnificent - if you're blessed enough to operate at the top end of the automotive market.

Mahindra XUV500

Indian summer

By James Siddall
A summary or conclusion of an article - normally comes at the end. Of course. But let's invert things, and I'll share my abiding impression of the Indian-made Mahindra XUV500, namely, "better...much better than you might expect."

Now when it comes to brand cachet Mahindra is hardly a name to be conjured with. At least not in South Africa. And building equity is going to take a while. But with the updated XUV500 it's surely on the right track.

This machine was launched here in 2011, and following a recent raft of improvements, it's very good indeed - for the price. Not covetable in the prestigious lifestyle SUV idiom, you understand, but rather honest, unpretentious and unattractive with what Mahindra only vaguely hyperbolically terms "cheetah-inspired styling."

Main changes to this seven-seater turbodiesel SUV number a comprehensive rework of the front end that results in a more homogenous, upscale appearance, something that's enhanced by LED daytime running lights. Inside, the cabin gets durable-feeling all-black leather upholstery, and a big seven-inch full-colour touch-screen display in the centre stack, among other improvements.

It's pretty visible even in bright sunlight, is this screen, and it gives access to infotainment features such as satellite navigation with voice prompts, Bluetooth, reverse camera, and music streaming, as well as iPod compatible USB sockets.

As ever, power comes from a 2.2-litre turbodiesel making 103kW and 330Nm from 1,600rpm, with a rather optimistic claimed combined fuel consumption of 6.5 litres per 100km.

Power runs via a six-speed manual gearbox to the rear wheels - or all four wheels in the case of the range-topping W8 model.

And speaking of the W8, you can expect a lot of kit including climate control, auto-on headlights and windscreen wipers, and a multifunction steering wheel.

A list to which you can add a refrigerated centre console, and charging points in all three seating rows.

The W8 also comes with dual front, side and curtain airbags, plus an electronic stability program (ESP), while W6 and W8 versions get hill hold and hill descent control.

Resale values are unlikely to match those of the more established players, and the cocktail-party cred of a Mahindra is minimal. But then so are the prices...

Opel Adam S

Sporty and unique

Hurry, only 50 range topping Opel Adam S models have landed on South African shores making it a very limited edition with a price of R330,000.

With 110kW and 220Nm from its turbocharged 1.4-litre Ecotec engine, and an unladen mass of 1,178 kilograms, the Adam S delivers specific output exceeding 74kW/litre. It reaches 100km/h in 8,5 seconds and continues on to 210km/h in fifth gear in just 7.9 seconds.

Available in three distinctive 'Twisted' colour combos: Saturday White Fever, Shiny Rock and Red 'n' Roll. The first two have contrasting red roof and pillars, while the latter has a slate grey upper section.

The 18-inch 'Propeller' wheels have a distinctive five spoke design, with red brake callipers clearly visible. For the first time in an Adam, the exhaust tip - in this instance a chromed, oval one - can be readily seen.

The Adam S is designed with performance in mind, to this end all of the vehicle's external styling features have a benefit:

"The roof-coloured rear wing is the most obvious change and importantly, it adds 100 Newtons of rear downforce at speed.

"A deeper front spoiler performs a similar role to the wing, adding downforce as speed increases to maintain the front/rear aerodynamic balance.

"Side skirts control airflow under the car, helping the Adam S hug the driver's chosen line through sweeping bends.

"The big wheels not only add gravitas by filling the wheel arches to capacity, but their lightweight design reduces unsprung weight and also improves throttle response by minimising inertia.

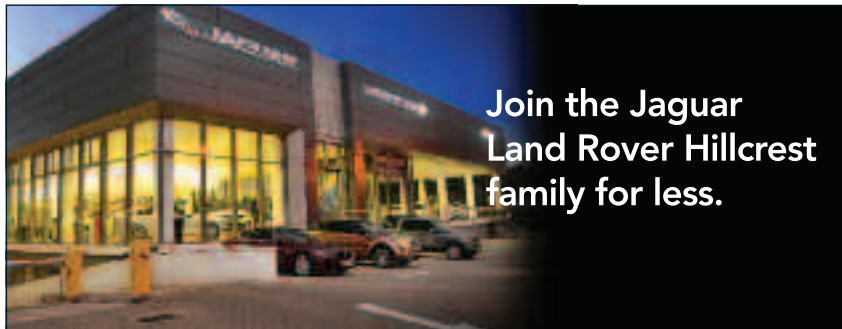

"Premium quality performance tyres measuring 225/35/18 are fitted, and along with the offset of the wheel result in increased track width (1472mm in front and 1 464 at the back) for improved stability.

Under the skin the Adam S boasts a stiffer front anti-roll bar and stiffer springs for improved driving dynamics. In addition Opel has upgraded the brakes to the same specification as the previous-generation Corsa OPC.

The engine meets stringent Euro 6 emission standards, and is equipped with Stop/Start Eco setting.

Other weight-saving features include a cast iron block with a hollow frame structure, hollow-cast camshafts and a plastic intake manifold.

There's a leather-wrapped gear lever knob, while rubber-studded pedals and a thick-rimmed steering wheel make the control interfaces as intimate as possible.

Top five...

The Japanese brand is making its debut as a finalist, with the winner set to be announced at the New York motor show on March 24.

Lunar Quattro - An Audi headed for the moon

By Miles Downard

It might look like one of those primitive dog-robots that follows you about the house, but this is in fact Audi's new moon-conquering lunar rover.

It's a bizarre notion I know, a motor manufacturer entering the 'space race' nearly 50 years after the first man walked on the moon. So here's a bit of background.

It's all part of a competition called Google Lunar XPrize, a contest in which Google is promoting us Earth-dwellers to put things back on the moon. In order to win, teams have to send a privately funded rover up into space, land it on the moon, travel 500 meters, and then transmit high definition images and video back to Earth. Oh and there's a $20million cheque waiting for the first lot to complete the task.

So, back to Audi's little buggy. Dubbed the Lunar Quattro, it's a 35kg 3D-printed moon car made of titanium and high-strength aluminium.

Supposedly fitted with Audi's Quattro all-wheel-drive system, the wheels rotate 360 degrees to allow it to crab its way across the moon's undulating, rutted surface with confidence.

Powering the little rover are four wheel-mounted hub motors, fed electricity from a lithium-ion battery that's charged by a swivelling solar panel which tracks the sun.

It's capable of a face-bending 3.5km/h top speed.

Two cameras in the head of the rover gather 3D images of the vehicle's surroundings, while a third is used to study materials and produce high-resolution panoramic images that can be beamed down from space to satisfy the lot at Google.

Lunar Quattro was let loose at the Detroit Motor Show to scamper about the place like a lost puppy in an attempt to stir up some publicity.

I'm sure the next time we'll see it will be on the Moon - soon too as verified launch contracts have to be completed by the end of the year, while all missions must be completed by the end of 2017.

Gearbox boffin Bruce Verdon pops up in Pinetown

By Gavin Foster

One of Durban's most colourful motorsport personalities of the '80s and '90s, Bruce Verdon, popped up in town on holiday last week 18 years after leaving South Africa for the UK.

Bruce, who'd qualified with the South African Railways as a millwright in the '70s set up his own engineering business in Pinetown ten years later, and started tuning and racing motorcycles at about the same time.

He was a regular winner in hill climb events on an ancient Norton Commando, and repeatedly topped the points tables on a Husqvarna in super-singles racing. He proved equally adept at winning club social events though, and his antics are still fondly remembered today by those who knew him - and some who didn't.

Bruce's life took an extraordinary turn when he abandoned the UK for New Zealand, where he established a machine shop in Hamilton. "I'd taken my machinery from Pinetown which reduced set-up costs but business was slow because I was very much an outsider. That changed when a guy from Hamilton who was building a replica 1950's Matchless G45 asked me whether I could build him a five speed gearbox and that was the spark that got me going."

During his apprenticeship on the railways Bruce had been exposed to foundry and blacksmith work so he knew what was required, and in his Pinetown racing days he'd machined various gearbox components to change the internal ratios of his old Norton gearbox, so he took the job on.

"I knew I could do it so I wasn't daunted. I made a prototype and in its first race, a big event at Philip Island in Australia, he got pole position, two race wins and a lap record on the bike."

Within a month Bruce had orders for 30 more racing gearboxes and he's never looked back. His company, Trans Tasman Industries Limited, has manufactured around 800 heavy-duty four, five and six speed motorcycle gearboxes and sold them round the world.

"Once I had money behind us I could start developing sequential gearboxes for racing cars, and built a prototype that we gave to a local racer for a year. We followed its progress and made a few small changes and then redesigned it completely before going into production. We sold our first ten in 2009 and have moved about 150 to date, with orders increasing all the time."

All entrants in the very popular NZ V8 road racing series now use TT Industries six-speed manual transmissions.

All work and no play would, of course, make Bruce a dull boy, and that would never do. He rekindled his passion for motorcycle circuit racing and started competing on classic racebikes in Australia and New Zealand, which helped keep his blood pressure down and gearbox sales up.

He's since raced his 500cc Manx Norton and 750cc BSA Rocket 3 in the USA and at the Isle of Man Classic TT, with the highlight so far being two fifth places at Daytona in October 2011. That's pretty good for a boykie from Pinetown, especially when you see that third place in both instances went to 1991 and '92 World Superbike Champion Doug Polen, and 20 times American national champion Dave Roper finished sixth both times.

Community Centre mentors Isipingo pupils

Isipingo SAPS has formed a partnership with the House of David Community Centre and will be visiting schools in the Isipingo area to conduct programmes that will focus on different social issues.

The centre which has been serving the community of Isipingo for the past 18 years, recently embarked on a new programme called the Fearless, Fabulous and Feminine (FFF) programme created for young girls by author and motivational speaker, Melina Singh to address the challenges such as identity, destiny, sexuality and grooming that young girl experiences.

“We approach young girls from the age of 12 and upwards in different schools and we have these talks for an hour. We have found that pupils are responsive and open. Thus far we have impacted the lives of over 2500 young girls and our aim is to reach many more schools,” said House of David Community Centre’s facilitator, Vanishree Pillay.

If anyone would like to host this programme for young girls in their community or schools, contact Vanishree Pillay on 079 697 6152.

Fishing Report

Fishing:

Some great Brown Ray and Diamond Ray action was had at Ushaka Beach after the strong North Easterly winds last week. Shad, Bronze Bream and Pompano were reported from Margate. The Durban harbour is working well with Grunter on the banks and big Rock Cod near A Shed. Off shore angling has been brisk with good catches of Couata and Dorado.

Weather:

Expect moderate South Westerly winds midweek accompanied by cloudy skies and some chance of rain. The weekend will be windy and hot.
