Community outcry over denial of gangsterism

Brighton Beach cluster commander says gangsterism does not exist in Wentworth and surrounding areas

There has been a public outcry on social media networks following remarks made by a local cluster commander on popular investigative show, Carte Blanche, on Sunday, that gangsterism does not exist in the area. The insert that appeared on the show highlighted the increase in crime and the rise of gangsterism in the Durban South suburb over the years. Although the programme was supposed to bring awareness on the plight of the many families affected by gangsterism in Wentworth, it has left residents furious and have questioned the actions of Brigadier James Sayer, Brighton Beach Cluster Commander.

People took to social media to express their disbelief and disgrace at the statement made by the commander. Local councillor, Aubrey Snyman who did not appear on the show, voiced his disappointment. "The brigadier does not know our area. I have been living here for over 50 years and I can tell you now that gangs have been operating since the sixties. It is very disappointing to note that someone in a top position could make such a statement. It is utter nonsense and I will confront him soon about this," said Cllr Snyman.

He added that back in the day there was no such thing as gun violence, but now firearms are being freely distributed in the community. The recent shooting of Tremaine Marais which is still fresh in the minds of locals was mentioned in the insert.

The shooting which occurred on Christmas Day is believed to be drug-related. Twenty-two-year-old Tremaine Marais was believed to be on his way to a friend's house when he was allegedly shot in the back during the shootout. Community member, Sheldon Francis, who scoffed at the no-gangs statement said, "The more they deny that there are no gang wars in Wentworth, the more we will lose young children because clearly the police don't have those gangs under control." Francis who is actively involved in the community has been running numerous programmes to help the youth choose a better path. "I have a Saturday programme for young children to teach them that life should not be about drugs and crime," he said.

Another irate resident, business owner, Peter Moolman said, "It's very disappointing when high ranking officers deny the existence of gangs. Brig Sayer has definitely hurt the confidence of the policemen that are trying their best to combat gangsterism. The community has now lost faith in the SAPS since his statement. People are being murdered and little is being done. If the cluster commander believes there is no problem, he will not set up any task force to deal with the issue. To be fair the Brig could also be a victim of watered down information from the police. However we interpret the situation it's a matter of great concern."

Carte Blanche presenter and journalist, Bongani Bingwa, who conducted the interview also shared his view on social network, Twitter. He tweeted, "The community of Wentworth has been gripped by fear - gangs rule the roost yet local SAPS say it's all in their heads."

Members of a popular Wentworth community group on Facebook aired their opinions. One distraught community member said, "I would like to know who called Carte Blanche and why was the community not called in to sit down with them. I am stunned that police commander said there are no gangs in the area. All these fights and shootings must be taking place amongst 'ghosts' then," said the angry group member. She also raised a point about the many articles pertaining to the murders and gang wars in Wentworth. "So are they saying that every news article printed in the media is all lies?" Attempts were made to reach Brigadier James Sayer for comment, however they were unsuccessful.

For further information on the Saturday programmes, contact Sheldon Francis on 073-080-8319.

Post Budget briefing at Coastlands Hotel

CEO of LSP Lazarus Pillay, together with speaker of eThekweni Logie Naidoo, member of Parliament Omie Singh, joins the incoming Minister of Finance, Nhlanhla Nene, at the post budget briefing 2015 at the Coastlands hotel on Friday.

Petrol price set to increase by 96 cents

The Department of Energy has announced that the price of petrol will go up by 96 cents a litre while a litre of diesel will cost 74 cents more, from March 4, 2015. While motorists will be left feeling lighter in their pockets, long queues are anticipated at petrol stations across the country as motorists prepare to fuel up before the heavy increase. It is evident that a price increase of this magnitude will have a major impact on the community.

This will force domestic workers, scholars, pensioners and various lift clubs to make monthly travel budgets and spend a little more on daily trips to work, school and leisure. Shoppers will be expected to spend a little more on their travelling costs along with groceries.

The taxi fare costs to Durban central from various units of Chatsworth now stands at R14,00 and bus fare at R12,00. Inner circle fare costs are R9,00 in and around Chatsworth areas. Locals fear that an impending increase in the commuting tariff will mean leaner wallets all around.

You will be bowled over by our great taste

Several dagga trees discovered under Hullets Bridge

Following numerous complaints from business owners about the increase in robberies, hijackings, house break-in and goods stolen from the back of trucks, members of Montclair SAPS, the Crime Prevention Unit and CPF members conducted a search under the Hullets Bridge in Clairwood, last week. Members discovered that there were illegal shacks erected under the bridge which were demolished. Dagga trees were also discovered, removed from the area and destroyed. One person was also arrested for the possession of heroin. An officer who wished to remain anonymous said, "Shacks are not supposed to be built under the Hullets Bridge. A few times before, the SAPS and Metro police conducted searches to eradicate the illegal shack dwellers.

Hullets Bridge is known as a notorious hide-out for drug users. "We are sending out a message that we do not want criminals destroying our homes and area," said the member. Captain Perumal, the operations manager, said that after many complaints, his team conducted the operations which resulted in 10 dagga trees being seized and destroyed. "Clairwood has a reputation for its crime and we are trying our best to eradicate it. This is just the start of several operations," added Perumal.

2012 hijacking case solved

A hijacking case that occurred in 2012 was recently put to bed after the accused was sentenced to 12 years imprisonment, recently. Detective W/O Roshan Ramesar worked round the clock to secure the conviction.

Detective W/O Ramesar who secured 12 year conviction.

On July 31, 2012, a man went to Natraj, a popular shopping venue, with his wife and newborn baby to visit his family. Two men confronted him and held a gun to his head, instructing them to get out. The hijackers got into the car but encountered some problems as the vehicle could not start. The owner of the car noticed that they were having an issue and began throwing bricks at his own car in hopes that they would not take it. Members of the community noticed what happened and joined in to assist the car owner. The two suspects were then outnumbered and although armed, abandoned the car and fled on foot. One suspect managed to escape but the other was not so lucky when he was apprehended and arrested after the arrival of the police.

The victim positively identified the suspect and he was sent to court, where he was released on bail. After receiving bail, the accused went into hiding for a year. D/W/O Ramesar who took over the case, worked hard. Many months were spent trying to trace the accused. Then new information was received in November 2013 that the accused was hiding in the BB section in Umlazi. Without wasting time, Wentworth SAPS detectives formed a task team and proceeded to Umlazi to arrest the accused. However, the accused had been alerted about the police and managed to flee from his hideout.

Numerous observations were held at his house that year, but the accused was still untraceable. In 2014, D/W/O Ramesar, without fail, gathered more information which led to the suspect's arrest. He tried to escape but failed.

D/W/O Ramesar was commended for his dedication to the case. The detective was commended by the branch commander, Major Ramdass, and the station commander for his commitment and apprehension of the suspect.

Cop linked to fatal Christmas Day shooting

A police captain was arrested outside the Durban Regional Court last Wednesday after a warrant of arrest was issued by the Hawks. The policeman has been linked to the Christmas Day shooting of Tremaine Marais, a young soccer player who was shot and killed during a shootout. The incident is believed to have been drug-related.

The police officer, who is ranked as a captain, is known to the newspaper, however, he cannot be named just yet. It is believed that he was in court for another case in which he was charged for the attempted murder of a man who was shot and wounded on New Year's Day outside a popular entertainment venue in Bluff. The captain had handed himself over to Brighton Beach SAPS.

A staff member at the popular entertainment venue recalls the day of the New Year's Day shooting and could only describe it as havoc. "December 2014 was one of the worst months at the club. Patrons were scared to come to the club. This policeman caused a lot of havoc for us as staff members as he didn't realise that many of us need the job at the club to support our families. We rely on tips and we all suffered because of his actions. If it was not for the club owner still paying us despite him making no money, most of us would not have had a Christmas or even paid any bills. We are so happy that he has been arrested," said the employee.

Manager of the club, Peter Moolman, expressed his happiness with the arrest and commended Hawks on a speedy investigation. "It is now up to the court to send a strong message that this type of behavior can not be tolerated. This arrest will also send a strong message to all law breakers that nobody is above law not even policemen. Crime can only be curbed if the community stands firm against criminals and are not afraid to assist and give police information and evidence," said Moolman. He added, "We suffered immensely for his total disregard for human life and safety. Most of the time, the public blames club management for incidences of violence and are unsympathetic to our predicament. Maybe now they can see that we are also victims of people like this and we also pay the price of losing our clientele and suffering huge financial loss," added Moolman. Prior to his arrest, police recovered a pistol from his residence which turned out to be stolen out of a vehicle from Pinetown last year. The firearm was sent through for various tests and was linked to the scene of the Christmas Day shooting.

Four witnesses have also come forward, confirming that the same policeman pointed the gun and fired shots at them during the incident. Four charges of attempted murder, one count of discharging a firearm, one count of enticing public violence and one count of MITP were added to his charge sheet. Brighton Beach Detective Services thanked the Hawks for the partnership forged in this case which resulted in a positive outcome.

Top detective's passion for investigating

A Montclair detective will be flying the KZN flag high when he represents the province at the National Excellence Awards on March 13. Warrant officer Rico Naidoo received numerous accolades including detective of the year at the provincial awards, recently. His passion for upholding the law and protecting the innocent stemmed from his school days. He said that it was an indescribable need that he had to fulfil.

W/O Naidoo was also inspired by a relative who was a policeman. He had a sense of admiration and fascination with law enforcement and so joined the Wentworth Training Academy in 1986. He first started out at Chatsworth SAPS as a constable and then soon after went to Cape Town in 1989. "Luckily, I had that relative who pushed me. He told me that being a policeman is a challenging job which requires full dedication and if you want to be a success, you have to be hard working," said Naidoo.

Warrant Officer Rico Naidoo with his awards.

Kama Sutra 2 unleashed @ Sibaya

After the unprecedented sold-out successes of the original show, the enigmatic and charismatic Karou Charou unleashes the much anticipated sequel – Kama Sutra 2 (Come Again). Currently the most commercially successful Indian comedian in SA, Karou takes his audience on a 90 minute journey of discovery, tackling many aspects of sex and sexuality. In this show Karou's intent is to build healthier sexual relationships between couples, and as such he takes on the role of a sex coach, encouraging "talk" & advising couples to "ask and thou shalt receive". He introduces the art of "Role Playing", expounds the pro's and cons of internet porn and offers couples with kids great tips on how to still maintain a healthy sexual lifestyle, amongst other things. This Adult Rated show promises to be very educational, but you can rest assured that the "turbaned one" with his combination of slide shows, "interesting" props and "toilet" humour will have you wheezing with laughter. Karou warns that "sensitive" people with no pulse should "park by the pozie." Catch Kama Sutra 2 @ Sibaya from Friday 13 to Sunday 14 March. Limited early bird ticklets R80-00 at Computicket/Shoprite/Checkers or call 0861 915 8000. Show Enquiries : 083 660 1424. When he got to Montclair SAPS, he was promoted to sergeant. "With the promotions, came more responsibilities. It was indeed a challenge but I decided that doing investigations was the field I truly wanted to be in," said Naidoo. In 1998, Naidoo joined the field as a detective. He said that while it was challenging, he never gave up on becoming the best that he is today. "I found my calling in house break-ins, murder and carjacking cases," said the detective. The immense satisfaction that he got from solving a case led to successful convictions and to better himself in his craft. Three years ago, he solved the memorable Axe murderer case in which Phindile Ntshongwana was sentenced to five terms of life imprisonment for the murder and rape of four people. "It's cases like these that required a lot of my time, no stone was left unturned when solving the case. I want people to have a peace of mind and I want to give the families affected closure," said Naidoo. W/O Naidoo's dedication and commitment to his work clearly shows as he secured a total of a 191 years in his conviction rate.

He advises aspiring detectives to observe and listen. "Keep your eyes and ears open, through this you will gain direction. The job is extremely time consuming and challenging so I advise future detectives to practise patience. It requires knowledge and skill and the more cases you do, the better you become at it," said Naidoo.

Robbers snatch R20,000 from victim's pockets

Two armed robbers invaded a local business in Moberni and robbed a man of close to R20,000. It is believed that the suspects followed them from the bank. The owner who wished to remain anonymous in fear of reprisals said, "I didn't notice anything strange or suspicious on our way back. The only encounter we had was with three beggars asking for bread when we went back to our car, nothing else," said the victim. He was accompanied to the bank with two of his colleagues. After leaving the beggars behind, they made their way back to their company and as they entered the reception, two armed men dressed in blue overalls and balaclavas stormed in. One of the suspects shouted, "Where is the money?" A gun was held to his head and he was frozen with fear. The business owner did not respond quick enough, causing the other suspect to reach into his pockets and pull out the R20,000 in cash. The suspects ran away and were seen jumping into a white vehicle. No shots were fired and no one was injured. The victim was unable to identify the suspects. Montclair SAPS are investigating the matter further.

Members of the Food for Life, together with delighted pupils, who were given the new school shoes.

Food for life makes dreams come true

Thousands of children from Inchinga Primary School were full of smiles when they received a brand new pair of school shoes, last Monday. The school shoe initiative came about after members of the non-profit organisation, Food for Life, noticed that children were wearing worn out and broken school shoes. The team has been visiting the school since last year, feeding the children delicious meals. "Once a month, this wonderful group brings food to the school. I could see the difference it made in my pupil's lives as they would come to school knowing that Food For Life would be there. They have this smile on their faces that could warm the coldest days," said Inchinga Primary principal, George Shau. The 1400 pairs of school shoes were generously donated by Palm Foot Wear which was arranged by Lotus FM. The excited pupils lined up with great anticipation to receive their shoes and a deliciously prepared meal as well. Majority of the pupils are orphaned or come from disadvantaged backgrounds. The catholic school is known to be one of the best schools in the area, boasting a team of the finest and illustrious teachers that have moulded minds for many years. The school is also enriched with a deep history starting from 1918, where many South African leaders started their years of growth and knowledge. "The former mayor, Obed Mlaba, was one of the pupils that studied at the school," added the principal. The school, however, runs on a no fee basis and receives no income. But somehow, they always manage to pull through and stay on top. The school offers more than just an education, it offers the future generation hope.

Tremaine Fats Marias tournament

Merewent Suburbs FC invites teams to play at a 7 a side tournament that will take place on March 7. Ten players per team will be allowed. The tournament is a memorial in honour of the late Tremaine 'Fats' Marais. Each team will have to pay R500 which will go towards the prize money for the winning team.

Easter tournament

The Easter Tournament is about to kick off again. The tournament will start on Good Friday and end on Easter Sunday. R20,000 is up for grabs. All senior teams affiliated to the Durban South LFA are invited to enter; the tournament is also open for all affiliated junior teams. A meeting for them will be held on Wednesday, March 4. By Gavin Foster

I set off for Zwartkops Raceway near Pretoria at the end of January already feeling affectionate towards the Nissan Qashqai 1.6 DCI Acenta CVT. When I got home three days and about 1,500km later I liked it even more.

I was a long-established fan of the first iteration of the car, tipping it as a finalist for the Car of the Year competition after attending its 2007 launch because it offered genuine quality in a practical, likeable package at a very fair price.

Back then the three models - all with petrol engines - sold for between R190,000 and R220,000, but there was, at the time, no diesel engine available.

The second generation car that took us to Zwartkops was even better, although the price has, with inflation, crept upwards. The cheapest model in the new range, the 1.2T Vista, retails at R281,900, while the car featured here sells at a rather hefty R382,500.

The original Qashqai did well for Nissan worldwide, with two million being sold in eight years, causing some wags to call it Nissan's Cash Cow, and the new model, launched internationally last year, has already made its own mark.

The diesel model featured here is a 2015 SA Car of the Year finalist, while the Qashqai has scooped awards in the UK and Australia and is shortlisted for the World Car of the Year for 2015.

When the Nissan was delivered I was immediately impressed with its build quality, that's even better than that of the older model. The interior is constituted of quality materials, largely in matte and gloss black, with some satin silver and occasional bright chrome trim, and there's nothing cheap-looking about it.

The car is longer, wider, lower and lighter than the old model, and I reckon it's a good looker. Its styling is more butch than that of the outgoing version, and this is enhanced in the 1.6 DCI Acenta by the standard 19" alloy wheels.

Features included in the Acenta mix include the usual mix of climate control, ABS brakes and lots of airbags, a high-falutin' sound system with radio/CD/MP3/aux-in/USB and Bluetooth connectivity, a reverse camera, and tyre pressure sensors.

The Qashqai is spacious and very comfortable to drive, thanks to a superb suspension set-up. It's also pretty easy on the wallet. Driving up to Pretoria with the cruise-control set at an indicated 130km/h - that's about 123km/h in the real world - we used just 5,9 litres of fuel per 100km, and the return trip worked out even better at 5,6l/100km, indicating a range of 1,100km per 65 litre tank

Nissan cracks it with new Qashqai

The new Nissan Qashqai 1.6 DCI Acenta has already clinched many motoring awards and is a finalist in the 2015 SA Car of the Year.

without trying very hard.

I expected the 1.6-litre turbodiesel engine's performance to be somewhat lacklustre because the car is fairly chunky, but that was not the case. The 96kW of power at 4,000rpm is actually pretty good, but the 320Nm of torque at just 1,750rpm is even better. Boy racers may be unhappy with this, but for what the car was designed to do it was more than capable of pulling its weight at a respectable speed.

My only gripe - a small one - was with the gearbox. I detest those horrible Continuously Variable Transmissions that whine like a scooter or an outboard motor, but Nissan has fettled theirs to feel almost like a conventional auto, with artificial steps pulling the wool over your eyes along the way. This works so well that I initially didn't realise it was a CVT - the big giveaway was a slight reluctance to get off the line under hard acceleration. I'd still rather have a six-speed manual, thank you very much.

The Nissan Qashqai 1.6 DCI Acenta is a gem. For me it was a bonus that, with the back seats folded down, I could fit in a full-sized foam mattress and sleep at the racetrack in anticipation of an early start in the morning. It isn't a camper van, but it served my purpose just fine!

New Model

Fifth generation Outback here soon

Subaru Southern Africa has confirmed that a new and more adventurous Subaru Outback will reach showrooms shortly, moving further upmarket while continuing to offer an unrivalled blend of versatility and luxury.

The king of crossovers will thereby maintain its unique positioning as a capable and trusted solution to an active lifestyle in which overall vehicle capability plays an important part. And one in which aspects such as safety (both passive and dynamic) and reliability are non-negotiable. In fact, the new Outback will introduce technological features which enhance the former, while the latter is already synonymous with the brand.

The fifth-generation Outback will include capability-enhancing features such as Active Torque Vectoring for more dynamic handling, and the X-Mode suite of off-road driving aids. It introduces a number of innovations: an automated tailgate, and longitudinal roof rails which quickly convert to lateral crossbars, to make it more user-friendly and practical in its intended role.

It will also bring a new flagship to the brand's SUV offerings, in the shape of a potent 3.6-litre six-cylinder version of the Outback, to complement the existing 2.0-litre Boxer turbodiesel and 2.5-litre normally-aspirated petrol powerplants.

In all cases these engines are mated to Subaru's acclaimed Lineartronic CVT transmission and stability-enhancing Symmetrical All Wheel Drive.

All of this is in a package which is especially striking and purposeful, with a powerful new grille treatment, a more aerodynamic profile, and trademark rugged lower body mouldings to protect it in the rough.

Get your Zen on with the Volkswagen Gurus at Barons Durban

By Vincent Wallace

Being the leading authority in Durban on everything and anything Volkswagen – from Das Auto Engineering and BlueMotion Technology to best possible deals all year round – is why motor enthusiasts call Barons Durban on Edwin Swales Drive "The Volkswagen People."

I like to take it a step further and call them The Volkswagen Gurus, because not only are they all-knowing, they also create an environment on the showroom floor that helps me get my Zen on. No pressure or hard sales. Just a nurturing environment that is conducive to making informed decisions I never regret. Not to mention the meditative level my blood pressure gets brought down to when they tailor the deal to suit my budget and needs. If you would like to get your Zen on while making the best motoring decision of your life, get to Barons Durban on Edwin Swales Drive... They're The Volkswagen People.

Barons Durban on Edwin Swales Drive – 'The Volkswagen People' – offer a Super Convenient 60 Minute Express Service every Saturday. To Book a Test Drive or Service, call 0860 BARONS. Changes on the inside are even more dramatic, and the cabin is essentially all-new. While the Subaru focus on quality remains, it is roomier than before and the overall ambience is engaging, with improved levels of refinement. Says Subaru Southern Africa's Marketing Manager, Ashley Lazarus: "The Outback continues to define the segment which it created in 1994, combining wagon and SUV like no other. It remains a trendsetter when it comes to overall capability, but the move upmarket will add a new level of sophistics Marketing Manager, Ashley Lazarus: "The Outback continues to define the segment which it created in 1994, combining wagon and SUV like no other. It remains a trendsetter when it comes to overall capability, but the move upmarket will add a new level of sophistication befitting of a premium crossover." Pricing is expected to start from R479,000, inclusive of a three-year/75,000km comprehensive maintenance plan, and it will be available from Subaru's nationwide dealer network from the middle of March.

Mitsubishi ASX 2.0 GLS

Sturdy softroader

By James Siddall
It's always been a plucky little thing, the Mitsubishi ASX. And a hardy one, too, as you might expect given the manufacturer's background of nearindestructible - and often highly underrated, especially in the case of the Pajero Sport - off-roaders.

Now following a recent facelift, this small Mitsy is more beguiling than ever, with a series of subtle design and equipment upgrades enhancing an already appealing package. On the outside you now get new black roof rails and tinted windows, while on GLS and GLX models (and it was the former I spent a week with).

you can add new LED daytime running lights, and exceptionally attractive 17-inch alloy wheels.

Much is also made of the updated CVT transmission, which now actually gives slightly lower fuel consumption than its manual counterpart, but the version I spent time with was a five-speed manual.

Equipment levels are simply outstanding. Across the range you get a five-star Euro NCAP and AN-CAP safety rating, seven airbags, auto-on headlamps and electric folding side mirrors, for starters.

The range-topping GLS here adds to the list the likes of Active Stability Control and Electronic Traction, plus Hillstart Assist. Most welcome of all was a brilliant nine-speaker Rockford Fosgate audio system. Not quite what you'd expect in a small softroader or crossover as Mitsubishi terms the ASX (and the line between a softroader and a crossover seems blurred indeed).

On the move the normally aspirated, two-litre, four-cylinder petrol powerplant is perfectly adequate. Not incendiary you understand, just perfectly adequate, making 110kW at 6,000rpm and 197Nm of torque at 4,200rpm, which will move it from rest to 100km/h in a claimed 9.6 seconds.

Fuel consumption is pegged at 7.5 litres per 100km, and even with power going to the front wheels only, the machine sits solidly on the road. A ground clearance of 195mm, meanwhile, means that the ASX is more than passingly capable on bad roads, while for a small vehicle interior room is very good indeed. So is luggage space. The ASX has a 422-litre boot. Fold the 60:40 split rear seats and it will swallow 1,193 litres of cargo.

The ASX range starts at R299,900, with the manual GLS here weighing in at R342,900. That includes a three-year/100,000km warranty, and a five-year/90,000km service plan - as well as engineering integrity aplenty and just the slightest hint of understatement.

It's a tough yet refined little rhino of a machine this, and I'm just slightly surprised that we don't see more on our roads. We should.

Kia makes a presence with - A bold Sportspace

Kia Motors Europe unveiled an innovative new concept, the Kia Sportspace, at the 85th Salon International de l'Automobile in Geneva on 3 March 2015.

Created for long distance driving, the Sportspace has been designed for fast and efficient travel with maximum comfort and minimal stress, in the best grand touring tradition of the weekend getaway.

Designed at Kia's Frankfurt design studio, under the direction of Gregory Guillaume, Chief Designer Europe, the Sportspace features a unique and captivating body shape.

The car is born out of a commitment to provide stylish and exciting transportation for four, which is also spacious and functional, without sacrificing the performance, sustainability and economy that Kia is known for.

Recognisably a Kia, due to its signature 'tiger nose' grille, finely judged proportions and simple, clean surfaces gives Sportspace a bold, dynamic shape with real road presence. At the same time, it offers a high level of interior comfort and substantial practical load space.

"We set out to design a car that is a totally new breed of grand tourer - one for active people who need reasonable cargo space on the weekend, but don't want to compromise moving around in style, comfort and with an element of sportiness," explains Gregory Guillaume, Chief Designer Europe.

Care Network International cares for communities

A team of doctors and other medical practitioners from Care Network International conducted a free medical clinic at the Veritas Christian Ministries in Hillary. The CNT team offered primary health care consultation and treatment, dental consult and extractions, HIV testing and counselling, primary health-care medication and health education such as hygiene, diet, basic medical advice. The free medical day saw a major turnout as people attended the event recently and left happy and healthier.

For more information and support contact, Jenny Samson on 082-827-4817.

The team attended to the people who came in for help.

Locals encouraged to support Merebank Fair

Shreya Ghoshal's South African Tour 2015 is Almost Sold Out

The popular Bollywood singer, hailed as the 'Queen Bee of Playback' will be performing live at the ICC Durban on the 21 March 2015 for an unforgettable evening. The Airport Times Events being the Organizers of the Durban Concert and AA Events being the Organizers for the Johannesburg Concert say fewer than 20 percent tickets remain for events. The Shreya Ghoshal Concert is running out of tickets—just like in 2012 when it sold out. The magical experience that Shreya Ghoshal delivers becomes a lifetime experience to witness. The mystical musical journey will provide music lovers with the best Bollywood music in the world and an opportunity to live through memories with her captivating voice. Fans that have seen the sensation perform live have ranted and raved about the experience.

She has further added to the lineup for this is one show fans do not want to miss out. Tickets are available at Computicket, Checkers and Shoprite. Call 0861 915 8000.

2015 annual Salt March launched

Ciao Bella Cafe on Mahatma Gandhi Road (Point Rd) was the scene for the media launch of the 2015 annual Mahatma Gandhi Salt March on Thursday. This year's event will take place on Sunday, March 29, and will be departing from the Phoenix Settlement. The building in which the cafe has its home holds special significance as Gandhi was being housed and protected because a mob of South African Europeans and Africans were allegedly after him, in 1896. Granddaughter, Ela Gandhi, said that he had written a green pamphlet in which the South African Europeans believed he had attacked them, and so they had organised a crowd of Europeans and instigated some Africans to attack the Indians. "A large crowd of Europeans and Africans gathered at the Point but did not attack the other passengers as they were told that the target was Gandhi. When they spotted him, they immediately embarked on a vicious attack on him. He was saved from being killed by Mrs Alexander, the wife of the Commissioner of Police, Superintendent Richard Charles Alexander. She protected Gandhi with her umbrella," she said.
The 2015 Gandhi Salt March marks the 11th anniversary of the event which is aimed at commemorating the struggle of Gandhi and Nkosi Albert Luthuli for peace and equality. The Salt March is presented by the Gandhi Development Trust in partnership with the Department of Sport and Recreation, with support from eThekweni Municipality and the Government of KwaZulu-Natal.
"The Salt March attracts people from all walks of life and diverse cultures to celebrate the life of Mahatma Gandhi and Inkosi Albert Luthuli, both of who have been vocal in their support for the development of a culture of non-violence and ubuntu. Our march also commemorates the Freedom Charter and this year marks the 60th anniversary of our Freedom Charter," explained Gandhi.
Thousands of peace-loving citizens of Durban, together with government dignitaries and the consul general of India, are expected to take part in the Salt March. The walk begins at Phoenix Settlement, where the original Gandhi home stands in Inanda, at 7am. The route takes walkers through Inanda Rd and on to North Coast Road, uMgeni Rd and to the Kings Park Athletics Stadium – a distance of approximately 18km. All participants are invited to report to the places from where buses depart from Verulam, Tongaat, Phoenix, Mt Moriah, Chatsworth, Merbank, Umzinto, Inanda, Newlands West and other areas where there are organised groups. Those in Durban report at the Athletics Stadium at 6am. Buses will transport you to Phoenix Settlement. There will be secure parking at the Moses Mabhida Stadium.
There are kombis ready to pick up tired walkers from all the water and refreshments points. T shirts and medals will be given to all. Refreshments and drinks will be supplied at various points en-route. A hot meal will be provided at the end. To join this walk you can enroll on line at www.gdt.org.za and click on registration for 2015 salt march and then follow the steps. Isipingo Beach Intermediate cricket champions

Isipingo Beach Intermediate School recently participated in the Inter-school Mini Cricket one day tournament against affiliate schools within the Isipingo School's Sports Council. The team competed against Kamalinee Primary School in the finals and emerged champions. The staff of the school congratulates the IBIS team.

Colour Festival at Merebank Fair

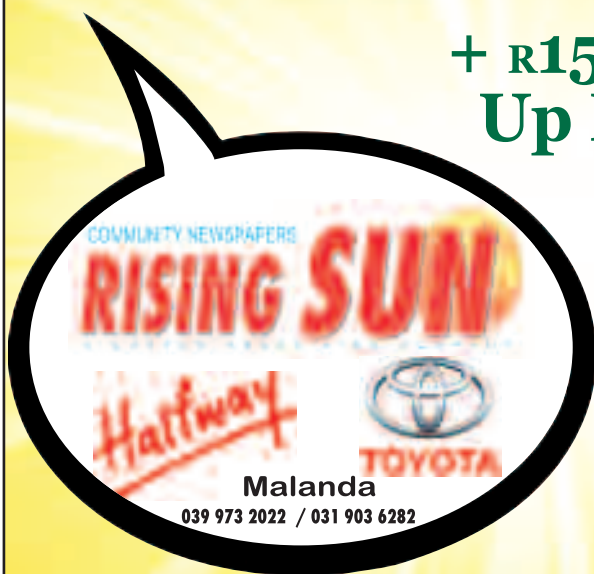

In a nation that touts itself as defined by the rainbow, colour is a big deal and Merebank is about to experience just what it means to become a rainbow nation, literally, at its first ever Colour Festival on March 13 at St Mary's Primary School. The concept has its roots in the Hindu religion and the annual and legendary Holi Festival in India – but in South Africa, and elsewhere, the expression is a meeting of music and magic: an electronic dance party that integrates the colour powders of Holi festival with a line-up of great music and a mission to unite all in colour. To date, the Colour Festival concept has taken the world by storm and successfully spread to countries such as Singapore, Germany and the USA, with Spain, France, Switzerland and many others currently planning to host their own versions. St Mary's is hosting the colour event at the Merebank Fair to have the same impact to bring people together through a mutual love of music and fun, and in that way give the rainbow nation physical expression in the province that boasts the most multi-cultural audience in South Africa. This non-religious event set on African soil makes it a truly amazing melting pot of cultural expression. The event promises to cater for multiple tastes and get the entire community dancing in a bright display of colour.
